

It's about 22 years since I left the City of London and started going to school in Coventry, in the UK. This sparked a passion for London and the city inspired me to. Biomathematics, a publisher of scientific books with a specific focus on mathematics for biology, is pleased to announce the publication of this new volume. GUIDED ARCHITECTURE, 2ND Edition, 2007, the reference book from Bill Wright, with which we are very familiar.

Q: Differentiate $\frac{dx}{x}$? I am working with the following differential equation: $\frac{dx}{x} = \frac{dy}{y} = \frac{dz}{z} = \frac{dw}{w}$ I need to differentiate each of them with respect to w. But I'm not sure what the answer should be. The answer says: $\frac{d}{dw} \left(\frac{dx}{x} \right) = \frac{1}{x}$ $\frac{d}{dw} \left(\frac{dy}{y} \right) = \frac{dy}{y^2}$ $\frac{d}{dw} \left(\frac{dz}{z} \right) = \frac{dz}{z^2}$ $\frac{d}{dw} \left(\frac{dw}{w} \right) = 0$ I have three questions. 1) What is the purpose of differentiating? Should I solve this before or after differentiating? 2) I am not sure why we write $\frac{dy}{y}$. What does it mean? 3) I am not sure what the answer should be. Can someone help me figure out what the answer should be?

A: What is the purpose of differentiating? If you can write $\frac{dX}{X}$ as $\frac{dX}{dY}$ and $\frac{dY}{Y}$, then it might be the right thing to do to change the variables so that $\frac{dX}{dY} = \frac{dY}{Y}$. Should I solve this before or after differentiating? There are cases where it makes sense to perform all the manipulations on both sides before differentiating. I am not sure what the
