A couple of weeks ago, we introduced you to Chris - the 26-year-old who described himself as a "lone wolf". The man is a university student who has a number of tattoos and a list of "crazy" hobbies he claims to enjoy, most notably horse riding. The image of the young man in a horse jumping over things that are unsteady would normally elicit a collective "meh," but the image has caused such a stir it is now the subject of an investigation by authorities, and has led to a call to a halt on his flourishing career as a YouTuber. Chris, whose real name has been withheld due to legal reasons, began his career, at the age of 17, by uploading videos of himself and his pet dog Tom, an Alaskan malamute, on the YouTube channel "AllFurryEverything". When the channel was created in June of last year, Chris called his channel "A little insight on my dog Tom and myself. We have some truly funny videos." Just over a year on, the channel had grown to over a quarter of a million subscribers and 4 million views, with thousands more watching the videos daily. Although the channel was supported by advertising, Chris earned very little from the videos. However, in April this year, Chris suddenly launched a new channel with a new pseudonym: "ShadyWasabi." On his new channel, he describes himself as a "YouTuber who specializes in showcasing weird stuff that normal people don't think is all that weird!" And the channel and the videos seemed more genuine than before. The channel quickly became popular, and in a matter of days, Chris had amassed over 800,000 subscribers. The young man began to buy more clothes for the "ShadyWasabi" persona, replacing the old style "dental floss" with the more feminine-looking high-heeled boots and skirts. At the time of writing, ShadyWasabi's videos cover a variety of topics, including "The Progression Of a Girl's Puberty," "How to Eat a Hot Dog In 4 Different

A more well-known version of Obama's State of the Union is his annual address to Congress. It's something that has been going on every year since the Founding Fathers of the United States and we'll continue to hear it, for a few more years at least, from now on. A look at some of the highlights from this year's State of the Union speech. Obama left Detroit and moved on to Washington to get back to the business of governing. On Tuesday, Barack Obama gave his first State of the Union speech of his second term and the first of a most common tradition of the United States. The occasion, more or less, is a national address given by the president of the United States every January to Congress and, for these days, a televised version of the speech is broadcast each year for the viewing of the U.S. citizens. Since his election, Obama has given these speeches in the oval office; the speech is by tradition the platform for the president to talk about what he has achieved in his term so far. As he ended his term of office, Obama mentioned the fact that he will stop giving his annual address to the nation sometime in early 2017. President-elect Donald Trump, himself, is thought to be the man to give the first speech after Obama's presidency. This year's address included remarks on topics ranging from middle-class debt to job vacancies at small businesses. Much of the State of the Union speech was made up of
